Payments/entitlements to ex Members of Parliament When a person leaves an organisation in the private sector, he/she receives a final lump-sum payment of entitlements plus their superannuation (which is held in a particular fund). Why then should 'long-serving' ex parliamentarians receive additional on-going payments once they have left their job! Only ex Prime Ministers should be entitled to some additional payments and only for a short period of time. These savings of tax payer funds would be quite substantial and could be utilised more productively elsewhere.
